I have the following resource: class Artwork :artist_id, :class_name => "Artist" has_many :gallery_images, :foreign_key => :artist_id, :dependent => :destroy has_many :custom_images, :through => :gallery_images, :source => :custom, :source_type => 'Artwork' accepts_nested_attributes_for :custom_images end And this form: '4' %> '4' %> The model association from the Artwork resource to the Gallery resource seems to work correctly (the number of GalleryImages is used in a select box) but I don't understand why the Nested Attributes form helper is trying to set the artist_id field for the GalleryImages nested form helper to the artist_id field on the Artwork resource (and not set it to artist_id). If I remove the artist_id field from the form_for on the GalleryImages nested form helper I get no error and the nested images are correctly stored in the DB. I'm using Rails 2.1. I think that the problem is the artist_id field on the Gallery resource (I'm not sure why that's there), but I don't know how to configure the Nested
