For . The main phytochemical component and biological activity of Artemisia annua (L.) has been known as artemisinin, or qinghaosu. This compound has been used in a clinical therapy for the treatment of malaria, a disease caused by parasite protozoa of the genus Plasmodium. A. annua is known to contain various types of chemical compounds, but its main phytochemical components have yet to be determined. Artemisinin is highly sensitive to heat, light and oxygen, and is a tricyclic sesquiterpene lactone. Such an unstable compound cannot be used in medicinal products. Therefore, the aim of development of a more stable and safer medicine was directed toward the determination of artemisinin, or more specifically artesunate, an active ingredient of artemisinin. In a traditional preparation process for artesunate, extracted crude materials containing a large amount of artemisinin are heated under pressure with 1N HCl. Thereafter, artesunate is separated therefrom by means of extraction with organic solvents, followed by distillation and drying. However, there are significant problems with such a process, including the following: 1) The process requires a large quantity of organic solvents, as well as expensive equipment; 2) The process is disadvantageous from the point of separation of artesunate from such crude materials as a mixture of the artemisinin and other components, and a disadvantageous result is the large quantity of artesunate which is discarded during the process; 3) Such crude materials as a mixture of the artemisinin and other components contain impurities in large quantities, and such impurities affect the quality of artesunate.Q: reduction and lifting points between affine schemes

I now can sew without having to tear around the house for something to sew with. My problem is...I don't sew. I love to see things through others eyes...and their eyes aren't even close to mine. So I am the first to admit that a lot of the changes that we make for our home and family are not MY ideas. They are the ideas of the other person. I can bring ideas, but I can't come up with many on my own. So I am like a gopher. I dig in and find a little bit of dirt for the homeowner to use. And like the home owner, I am happy to give and help where I can. I think that sums it up. So for Valentines Day I wanted to make a very special one for my wife. Since she is my biggest fan in the kitchen I thought that she would like to go the moonlight dinner route. Of course I had to make it out of her favorite fabric. No washing or ironing needed on this one. Here are some of the dinner dishes that I made. Using fabric that I already had purchased from Grand Lightening Vintage Fabrics (CLINICALLES.COM). The fabrics are from 2008. Any fabric is just as fun to use as the piece you have put in your stash. I think this would be a fun color combination for a dishcloth. Here are the tools that I use the most in the kitchen. 1 ba244e880a
