Harry is an orphan who lives with his Aunt Petunia and Uncle Vernon Muggles. When he is ten, he is saved from a troll by his Hogwarts professor, Albus Dumbledore, who takes him to live with him and his wife, Professor McGonagall. Harry's relatives don't think that he is doing well in school, and they encourage him to take his talents out into the real world. Harry, however, does not want to grow up and become a man. He has a dream of becoming a wizard, and at his twelfth birthday Dumbledore casts a series of spells in order to move him to Diagon Alley. At Harry's next birthday, Dumbledore takes him to the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, where he is inducted as a student at the age of eleven. There he meets the new Defense Against the Dark Arts professor, and best friend, Hermione Granger, and the other Hogwarts students. Harry then faces a series of problems as he tries to keep from getting expelled. Legacy Wizards and witches of different ages and races have dedicated much of their lives to the study of magic. Most magical creatures come from the so-called Elemental Trio: the Hippogriff, the Phoenix, and the Unicorn. They have made Hogwarts famous all over the world and have been able to prevent many, many threats from happening. To use magic, a wizard or witch must have a wand, but other items used by wizards and witches include wands, hats, scarves, brooms, apron pockets, cloches, rings, and other objects. More specifically, the wand is usually a straight or curved stick that can be customized and engraved with the wizard's or witch's name. The staff is a symbol of power and was first used by Merlin. There are two types of wands: one made of a magical metal that was created by Merlin and the other made of ordinary wood. When Merlin died, magic ceased to exist in the wizarding world. 2d92ce491b
