Pangaaru meli Things that are considered to be effective ways of cooking a particular dish and reducing the wastage of food. However, many of these methods have been observed to have adverse effects as well. Thus, in view of the diverse and traditional ways of cooking, the objective of this research is to identify and document popular methods of cooking in a sample population. To understand the diversity in the traditional cooking methods, focus groups were conducted in different regions of Central India and dialects of the language spoken in the study area were identified as well. The focus groups consisted of eight to ten people who were chosen randomly from five major communities in the study area: Hindu (Jain, Brahmin, and Gurjari, etc.) Muslims (Shikaris, Pathans, etc.) Christians (Baptists, etc.) Doctrine of any major sect of Christianity (Roman Catholics, Protestants, etc.) Indian Other than the above mentioned groups, many other communities existed and these groups were also considered in the study. The ethnic identity of the people was verified through self-identification. In this study, the food items were chosen randomly and some of the participants expressed their opinion on food items that did not come under the category of their knowledge. Traditional medicine in India is done by the practicing physicians. Homeopathic remedies, Ayurvedic remedies, Unani, and Siddha (Greek) medicine, forms the basis of the Indian Traditional Medicine. Unani, for instance, is a form of medicine that deals with the use of plants, herbs, oils, and minerals as medicines. Herbal remedies are often used to treat minor illnesses and they are prescribed by a doctor. In
