I've recently upgraded to Xcode 11.4 to start playing with SwiftUI, but I am facing an issue that I don't seem to be able to reproduce on my 9.3 version of Xcode. When I build, it fails when I try to run it on simulator. I just get an exception saying: 2019-03-13 13:35:23.918004+0100 App[31532:426914] -[App.PopoverPresenterViewController view]:

Everything in my code is new or migrated from a prior version, no legacy code. What am I missing? A: I finally was able to reproduce the error after a long time. It seems that somehow Xcode 11.4 and the "run on device" function weren't aligned. I migrated all my code to Xcode 10.3 and everything works perfectly. (I didn't even need to remove the application from the simulator.) Q: If this question is not on-topic, where can I ask? I have an application and I'm looking for expert's feedback and tips. I found the SO sister site Software Recommendations. But I want to learn what is the accepted way to post such questions here. I was asked to post

The Parineeta novel by Sarat Chandra Chattopadhyay was written for the reader who is bored with the same old story that she has read so many times. Here, a woman's place in the Indian society was discussed as a political and psychological subject. The protagonist of the novel is Sultana, the daughter of a zamindar. She was a spirited girl who did not appreciate her father's traditional attitude and was totally opposed to the saffron colour that her father wore. She was a rebel who was not willing to accept a submissive role in life. The novel was also a bid to destroy the unalterable social norms of that time. A radical view of society's expectations is presented in the book. Chapter one: The problem of social norms How Sultana grew up Sultana was brought up in her father's house. She spent the day doing her household work and learning from her mother. Her father had never shown any interest in her but there was not a single care about her future. When she was about to start her education, her father had the money to buy her a real dress. Sultana went to a school in Calcutta and started to learn English. She was a lively girl and all the other students used to call her monkey. But she did not mind this. In the company of her fellow classmates, she participated in their sports and games and had a good time in their extracurricular activities. She was a fast runner, a ball player and an excellent swimmer. She had to endure a few tantrums but it did not affect her happiness. On the first day of her school life, Sultana was astounded to see a group of senior girls speaking in whispers. One of them was a girl who was beautiful like a goddess. The others started to call her saint. She was wearing a crimson dress and a saffron ribbon around her neck. Sultana was awed by the beauty of her idol. She wondered what a saint could possibly want with a girl like her. Sultana was not aware of her own beauty. For her, it was like a lightening flash. And suddenly she was the only one who mattered.

Her classmates treated her with a mixture of respect and hatred. The girls in the group had initiated her to drink and indulge in lustful behavior. But Sultana was not affected by their antics. She 2d92ce491b
