(AP) - Republican gubernatorial candidate Rep. Asa Hutchinson said Monday it's "categorically untrue" that his wife has been indicted in a corruption probe, though he did admit that his former company, Spectrum Health, had given his wife an undisclosed sum for a child care center. The former U.S. attorney in Arkansas is the lone Republican running for governor. He took the latest twists in the federal investigation into bribery, fraud and bid-rigging against the backdrop of a debate Saturday in which several of his challengers accused him of being too close to President Donald Trump. Hutchinson said his wife, Kelly, has not been charged with any crimes. He said she was never the target of the investigation. She has been accused of hiding the value of an asset but has not been charged with any crime. "The only thing that I know she's been indicted for is she's been indicted on the wrong section of the law," Hutchinson said. "What she hasn't been indicted on is any underlying criminal activity." The Department of Justice said in a statement last month that a "former employee of a private child care center" was indicted on allegations that she accepted thousands of dollars in cash and gifts while working there in exchange for steering business to the facility. Among the allegations against the woman in the probe is that she signed off on lucrative public contracts for the center even though she knew it had a criminal background and a history of poor performance, according to court documents. But a former Spectrum Health official said that neither the center nor Spectrum is accused of any wrongdoing. "I don't believe that what we did was wrong," Dorothy Brown told the AP in an interview Saturday, calling the center "one of the greatest things I've ever been associated with." When asked if she was wrong to accept the money from Spectrum, Brown said she "would have if any other person would have done it." Brown said she was approached by a Spectrum official about the center's need for additional cash to improve, and the former CEO of the center told the department that his staff
