To do a more rapid version of the editing featured in this book, check out _Quick Fix for Photoshop Elements_ (part of the title _Digital Photography For Dummies_). For an all-around, easy-to-understand guide to photograph editing in Photoshop, see _Photoshop: The Missing Manual_. To learn how to take care of your digital images safely so you can enjoy viewing them for a long time to come, check out _Digital Photography For Dummies_.

Getting Prepared for Your Shoot After you've put together the equipment for your shoot and collected the images you need, it's time to start the editing. The first step is to open a document so you can see your images. Whether they're JPEGs, TIFFs, or RAW files, they're probably arranged in some sort of directory structure. Refer to Chapter 2 for information about how to navigate and control these images. Then you need to create a new Photoshop document. To do so, choose File⇒New, as shown in Figure 6-1.

FIGURE 6-1: To create a new Photoshop document, choose File⇒New. Photoshop automatically creates a new document of the default size and automatically creates a new image layer in the _canvas_, which is the area you see when your document opens. The number of layers and your editing canvas are controlled with the Layer panel on the right side of the workspace. You'll learn more about this panel in the next section. The image you see in the initial blank document doesn't exist. It's just an empty canvas waiting for you to add something to it. The tool you use to add things to your document is an _editor tool_. When you select the method you want to use, Photoshop asks you for a name and location for the new document. Its default name, ``Untitled.PSD``, is fine. The location is where you want to save the file, so type a name and click the Save button.

Creating a New Layer After you've saved a new document, the next step is to create a new layer. This allows you to save a few things, including the changes you make to the _canvas_ (the area in your new document where your image appears). Here's how to create a new layer: 1. **On the Layers panel, click the New Layer button at the bottom of the panel.**

Its new “moderately high level” the native tsql and the new “native” SSMS are changing the landscape. “moderately high” is one of the more serious changes that I’ve heard of. It will be a while before we see the native tsql update. It looks like the native SSMS is next in line to see a major update. 388ed7b0c7

You may have heard the buzz around the title that an Amber-Abe returning to the Jurassic Era. Well, its time to set the record straight. Amber... of sorts. About: Amber is a small town. Imagine you've been following the fortunes of the Eldridge family, in succession, for several generations. In the early 1900s, there lives a James Eldridge, who fathers a son James Eldridge II (Abe, portrayed by Jake Lacy) who, in turn, becomes a father to two sons: Allen (Mark-Paul Gosselaar) and Dale (Shawn Hatosy). Having attained middle age, Dale hires an attorney, Eric (Noah Bean), to draft a will leaving all of his property to his friend James, who has become estranged from the family due to financial difficulties. However, when Dale dies unexpectedly at age 39, his world is turned upside down, with the beneficiary of his estate, James, now also deceased, in the process. Refusing to believe they're next in line to inherit, Allen and his brother, Dale, go to the lengths of hiring a private eye (Dan Fogler) to find out just who the beneficiary was in James' will. The only lead they find is the name James Eldridge III, age 17, but there isn't much information about this so-called "missing link." Realizing they may have to share the property because James' will only covers Dale, they enlist the help of another private eye, Rick Gersh, a young version of his older self (Patrick Fischler), to track down James III. Finding James III only puts the brothers more at ease since James II's estranged stepfather (James Brolin) has been playing fast and loose with information and convincing Dale that he's really James III. As the brothers set out to solve this family riddle and restore brotherly harmony, they quickly realize the only way they can handle this issue is if they can locate James III and either get the real answers or change the testator's will. By now the news is commonplace: Polar Vortex 2.0 has struck the United States. Weather forecasters who foresaw it had no special powers, nor did the president. The national effort, named for its ability to chill temperature readings, to preserve life and the country, has, after 30 years of repeated forecast failures, succeeded in making its way down here from the Arctic region, the worst part of a rapidly rising Global Warming Polar Vortex. The news media are at the door, ready to play their roles in the drama of survival. Will the bottom fall out? Will the temperature plunge? Will the country sink into an icy depression? These are all good questions, but the real question is: Will any one really care, for weather is so familiar to them that it can be mere entertainment rather than a matter of life and death? The National Weather Service and the media have no authority to predict the future, nor have they any special knowledge of how to do so. They are in fact predicting the future not as to cause and effect, but as to the effect that is already here and will continue in the future. By failing to predict "what is" the weather service can only hope to predict what is to come. This is not a scientific experiment, but an attempt to predict the future by looking back at the past. And so it has come to pass, that the NWS is in a state of polarization. What has been predicted is meaningless and the theory may be proven or it may not. What will they predict? The fear-mongers are calling for increased governmental control of the weather, in the name of Global Warming. They are loudly proclaiming that major, economically destructive, climactic changes are to take place and so the NWS should be obliged by law to teach society to better prepare. The National Weather Service anticipates a future of increasing precipitation, hurricanes, earthquakes, tornadoes, sea-level rise, and for the first time in the agency's history, flooding in the lower 48 states. The ultimate rise in temperature is predicted to take place over the next few years, but most of this is already complete. The cold that will engulf the country for a time in the near future is already here and it is intensifying now. So the NWS is predicting a future of increasing precipitation and floods along with increasing temperatures. This is obvious nonsense to anyone who has lived through a
